"Having worked in the family business since childhood, I thought I had a good grasp of the business world. Soon after enrolling in PJC as a business major, I realized how much there was to learn and how valuable the college experience was. The faculty and advisors at PJC provided me with a solid foundation of educational essentials blended with practical and useful business tools."

PJC's First Capital Campaign Off to a Sterling Start

Less than a year into its first Capital Campaign, the Pensacola Junior College Foundation is pleased to announce that 52 percent of the $4.5 million goal has already been reached. Pledges and gifts in excess of $2.3 million are an early indication of the widespread enthusiasm and support which the campaign is generating.

PJC's Board of Trustees and the Foundation's Campaign Cabinet initiated the Building on Tradition—Investing in the Future campaign last December with 100 percent participation in giving. Within a few months, PJC employees had surpassed their challenge goal of $125,000, and to date have contributed more than $175,000.

Locally, the Switzer and Reilly families, descendants of the late Anna Lamar Switzer, set the pace for the campaign with an unprecedented $1 million gift. Their generous contribution will enable the college to establish the Anna Lamar Switzer Center for Visual Arts. For years to come, the Switzer Center will provide an enriched and expanded cultural environment, a consistent funding source for state-of-the-art technology and equipment, exposure to national and international artists, and scholarships for deserving students.

As impressive as its beginning is, the Capital Campaign still needs community-wide participation to be successful. Consider the following points:

- Meeting the $4.5 million goal is critical for ensuring that PJC's tradition of excellence is maintained in the future. As the cost of education continues to escalate, state and federal dollars for community colleges consistently have diminished. Private support provides a margin of excellence that tuition and tax support cannot offer.
- Meeting the campaign goal during its designated time frame will allow various matching programs to parlay that $4.5 million into as much as $9 million.
- PJC has a long history of mindful and prudent stewardship of funds.
- PJC's research and long range plans indicate financial support is needed in several areas serving the community as well as the college.

For these reasons PJC invites those it serves—individuals, alumni, corporations and foundations—to participate in our first Capital Campaign and to assure that our 51-year tradition of providing top-notch educational opportunities continues into the new millenium.

Foundation Friends Dare to Dream Big

Take a midsummer night—Thursday, July 15. Add more than 100 people who have big dreams for Pensacola Junior College. Place them in the elegant setting of the Pensacola Country Club.

You won't have Shakespeare's famous work, A Midsummer Night's Dream. But you will have the PJC Foundation Board of Governors' Annual Meeting which focused on dreams of a bright future for the college—dreams which can become reality through the Foundation's first Capital Campaign.

The Foundation reported a very successful beginning for its campaign, Building on Tradition—Investing in the Future. The campaign will fund student scholarships, endowed teaching chairs, program innovation and expansion, health training programs and equipment, instructional technology, WSRE, and cultural and athletic advancement.

Wayne Peacock, the Foundation's outgoing president, emphasized the importance of ensuring the educational excellence for which PJC is known.

"Countless students will realize their dreams of success because we dare to aim higher," he said. "Our good work will impact our community well into the next century. We are truly making an investment in the future."

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Donald McMahon,
PJC Foundation President

Pensacola Junior College's first comprehensive Capital Campaign, Building on Tradition—Investing in the Future, has been launched and is on its way to successfully meeting the $4.5 million goal. I am honored to be part of this effort and to serve as this year's PJC Foundation President.

The coming year will certainly pose challenges as we try to maintain the momentum of the Capital Campaign while not neglecting our previously existing areas of fundraising. To meet these challenges, we will try to maximize the management of funds and investment opportunities. We also hope to establish and activate committees to carry on the work of the Foundation.

After half a century of serving Northwest Florida through educational opportunities, cultural enhancement and community service, PJC is now looking to our community for the support necessary to keep its outstanding programs in place and even to expand in areas where needed.

The Capital Campaign is just one of many opportunities that the PJC Foundation offers for those who wish to be part of that expansive educational process of serving students both young and old, and of serving the community both today and tomorrow.

I appreciate the opportunity to lead the PJC Foundation during this eventful year. Together, we can meet the challenges before us!

Don McMahon

Capital Campaign Lead Gift Honored at December Gala

A warm December evening and the fragrance of a sumptuous meal provided a festive backdrop for the PJC Foundation's 1998 Grande Holiday Buffet and internal kick-off of the Leadership Gifts Division of the Capital Campaign.

More than 200 friends of the college gathered in the Student Center to enjoy a gourmet meal prepared by students in PJC's Culinary Management program directed by Howard Aller and to be serenaded by students from PJC's Music and Theatre Department directed by Don Snowden.

But the highlight of the evening was the introduction of the Building on Tradition—Investing in the Future Capital Campaign to PJC's internal community and the announcement of the campaign's

"We have significant numbers of needy students and potential students who either don't qualify for financial aid or can't get enough aid to devote full-time to college study. I hope the Capital Campaign will result in sufficient scholarship money so that no deserving resident of our district foregoes a college education because of insufficient financial aid."

—Dr. Charles A. Atwell,
PJC President

Tommy Tait, president of Whitney Bank, was introduced as the campaign's general chair.

Richard Baker, PJC Board of Trustees member and Foundation Leadership Gifts co-chair, challenged the PJC employees, alumni and friends to support the campaign efforts. PJC President Charles Atwell announced that contributions from within the PJC family had already begun.

The PJC Board of Trustees and the Capital Campaign Cabinet quickly reached 100 percent participation in giving. PJC employees have surpassed their challenge goal of $125,000 with contributions totaling more than $175,000 to date.

Below: Richard Baker, a member of PJC's Board of Trustees and Capital Campaign Cabinet, helped inaugurate the campaign by challenging the extended PJC family to be among the first to participate in the giving program.

"From its outstanding educational programs to its invaluable community service, PJC has touched the lives of thousands of Northwest Floridians for the past half century. Now the Capital Campaign provides an opportunity for us to return the favor and to play a part in touching the lives of tomorrow's students through scholarships and enhanced educational opportunities."

PJC 1999-2000 ANNUAL FUND: PRESIDENT'S CLUB

The President's Club of Pensacola Junior College was created to provide a source of funds to be used in the advancement of the college where state funds will not suffice. These unrestricted funds allow the college the flexibility to focus on the areas of greatest need, including scholarships, teacher mini-grants, student and faculty recruitment and retention, program enhancement, and other special needs not funded by the state.

President's Club members are recognized publicly for their support of PJC and offered complimentary admissions to many college-sponsored events. In addition, members of the President's Club gather at least once a year at a special event, this year to be part of the Lyceum series.

Charles Atwell, PJC president, will be hosting a special reception for President's Club members on Oct. 28 with Michael Graves (see related story, this page). Graves, an internationally recognized architect, will be presenting a lecture titled "Telling Stories," an historical overview, at the Ashmore Auditorium on Oct. 29.

The President's Club is open to any person/organization wishing to contribute a minimum gift of $250 annually toward the advancement of the college. President's Club membership is a special category for giving and part of the Annual Fund of the college. Call 484-1560 for details.

With the help of President's Club donations, PJC continues to be a leader in providing outstanding educational opportunities, ensuring the college's continued growth and the future of Northwest Florida.

Visual Arts Center to be Named for Anna Lamar Switzer

Pensacola Junior College received a $1 million gift from the Switzer and Reilly families to establish the Anna Lamar Switzer Center for Visual Arts. The unprecedented gift was announced at the inauguration of the Capital Campaign last December.

The contribution was made in honor of the late Anna Lamar Switzer, a local patron of the arts and education, by her descendents: Dee Dee (Switzer) and Kevin Reilly Sr.; Janie and Robert Switzer; Fran and Charles Switzer; Mary Ann and John Switzer; Mary (Switzer) and Gordon L o u g h ; Winifred and Kevin Reilly Jr.; Jennifer and Sean Reilly; Anna (Reilly) and Matt Cullinan; and Mary and Wendell Reilly.

The gift will be combined with college funds and state match dollars to fund the expansion and remodeling of the current Visual Arts building. A new lecture hall/gallery and exhibit area will be part of the construction slated to begin in 2000 with plans for completion in 2001.

In addition to the facility renovation, the gift will provide for the following endowments:

- The Anna Lamar Switzer Endowed Visiting Artist and Lecture Series will bring recognized state, national and international artists and scholars to the college and the community as guest lecturers. Award winning architect Michael Graves will be the first guest speaker in this series on Friday, Oct. 29 (see related story on this page).

- The Anna Lamar Switzer Endowed Teaching Chair will enable the college to recognize exemplary teaching and continue to provide the highest level of instruction to students. The first award is planned for the spring of 2000.

- The Anna Lamar Switzer Endowed Scholarship Fund will provide full two-year scholarships for outstanding students who display great promise in the arts.

An integral part of the Anna Lamar Switzer Center for Visual Arts will be a Community Liaison Panel. This group of leaders in the local art community will serve as a communication link to the college regarding the community's needs.

"This gift will make an enormous difference in what the college can provide to students of the visual arts as well as to the community at large," said Allan Peterson, Visual Arts Department chair and Gallery director.

Anna Lamar Switzer

Anna Ashley Lamar was born in Valdosta, Ga. on Sept 11, 1900. Her parents, Caroline (Varnedoe) and Charles Lamar, moved their family to Pensacola in 1903 and soon founded what would become Lamar Outdoor Advertising. She attended the Armstrong School in Pensacola, the Lucy Cobb Institute in Georgia, and the Hartridge School in New Jersey.

Anna Ashley Lamar married Wendell Switzer in 1924 and traveled extensively during her husband's 45-year career in the U.S. Navy. When Vice Admiral Switzer retired, they moved to Pensacola where she continued her close association with the Navy and became a community activist.

Mrs. Switzer was the first woman named to the Naval Aviation Museum Foundation board, and was a life member of the Pensacola Historical Society, a past president of the Pensacola Art Association, and an honorary trustee of the Pensacola Museum of Art. She wrote The Lamar Heritage, published in 1972.

Admiral and Mrs. Switzer lost two sons in Naval aviation accidents, Lt. j.g. Wendell Switzer Jr. in 1955 and Lt. Cmdr. John Lamar Switzer in 1959. Admiral Switzer died in 1970. Anna Switzer died March 27, 1998, and is buried in Arlington National Cemetery with her husband and sons.

PJC Initiates Distinguished Artist Series With Architect Michael Graves

Award winning architect Michael Graves will be the inaugural speaker for the Anna Lamar Switzer Distinguished Artist Series at Pensacola Junior College. Graves will present "Telling Stories," an historical overview of architecture, at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 29, in the Ashmore Fine Arts Auditorium.

Named for the late Anna Lamar Switzer, an avid patron of the arts, the Distinguished Artist Series will regularly bring acclaimed artists and scholars to the college and community as guest lecturers.

Graves has been in the forefront of architectural design since the beginning of his practice in 1964, winning more than 100 prestigious awards for his designs in architecture, interiors, products, and graphics.

Among his 200 design projects are the corporate headquarters for Humana and the Disney Company, the Newark Museum, and the Washington Monument Restoration scaffolding, as well as major projects in Europe and the Far East.

Graves is also well known for his design of furniture, furnishings, and artifacts, many of which are marketed under the trademark "Graves Design."

Scholarship Spotlight

Ami-Lee Wilder Memorial Scholarship

Virginia Rush, the first recipient of the Ami-Lee Wilder Memorial Scholarship Endowment, recently graduated from PJC. Rush says the scholarship allowed her to return to PJC after dropping out of her college classes several years earlier to go to work.

The scholarship endowment was established in 1991 in memory of Ami-Lee Wilder who was a student at PJC at the time of her death. Since Ami-Lee was a member of Phi Theta Kappa Honor Society, the scholarship is generally awarded to an honor student.

Funds for the scholarship are provided by an endowment established by family and friends of Ami-Lee. The Liberty Sertoma Club, of which Ami's mother is a member, sponsors a golf tournament in Ami-Lee's name each year to raise funds for the scholarship.

As the endowment has grown, three more scholarship recipients have been added.

The first recipient of the Ami-Lee Wilder Memorial Scholarship, Virginia Rush (right), is congratulated by Harrison and Martha Wilder.

Chadbourne Foundation Endowed Scholarship for Engineering

Fancy Wingerd, a recipient of the Chadbourne Foundation Endowed Scholarship for Engineering, has recently graduated from PJC. Wingerd says the scholarship provided the financial assistance necessary to complete her education at PJC.

This scholarship is generally awarded to a deserving second year student enrolled full time in the A.S. Civil Engineering Technology Program or the A.A. Pre-Engineering Program.

Since the endowment has grown, this scholarship now is granted to two recipients.

Charles M. Hardin Memorial Scholarship

Nicholas Angelo and Lynn Burris II, are recent recipients of the Charles M. Hardin Memorial Scholarship.

The scholarship endowment was established in memory of Charles M. Hardin, who had been a member of the Jazz Society of Pensacola. The scholarship is awarded to a deserving full time music student involved in PJC's Wind Ensemble and Jazz Ensemble.

The Jazz Society of Pensacola (JSOP) provides funds for the scholarship. JSOP is an organization of musicians, teachers, students and "listeners" working to advance jazz music. Besides awarding scholarships to outstanding students, JSOP also sponsors music programs in the public schools, jazz concerts throughout the year, and public access TV jazz shows. JSOP is founder and supporter of the Pensacola Jazz Fest and Pensacola Jazz Party.

M.J. Menge Bell Tower Dedicated During 50th Anniversary Events

A highlight of PJC's 50th Anniversary events was the dedication of the M. J. Menge Bell Tower on the Pensacola campus, April 17.

PJC students, staff, alumni and friends of the college gathered for ceremonies honoring Pensacola attorney M.J. Menge for whom the tower is named. A dedicated leader and PJC alumnus, Menge is recognized for his commitment to higher education in Northwest Florida and for his contributions to a variety of beneficial projects and activities in the community.

The tower dedication also included placement of a time capsule holding PJC documents and memorabilia. The capsule is scheduled to be unsealed on PJC's 100th anniversary, Sept. 8, 2048.

The 80-foot brick and stucco tower is the only public campanile in the northwest part of Florida. Carillon bells, operated via the latest in compact disc technology, sound chimes on the half-hour.

McGuire's Bagpipe Band got the festivities off to a rousing start.

Top: PJC President Charles Atwell, M.J. Menge and PJC Past-President Horace "Ed" Hartsell performed the ceremonial ribbon cutting as the chimes rang out.

Above: M.J. Menge and his wife Sandy enjoy lunch and a reception at the Student Center following the dedication ceremonies.

Match Program Doubles Your Money

Have you thought about establishing an Endowment or scholarship to Pensacola Junior College? Now is the perfect time.

All scholarship donations made to PJC through Dec. 31 qualify for dollar-for-dollar matching funds through the State of Florida Challenge Grant program. The PJC Foundation must raise private dollars to receive the entire guaranteed grant allocation.

Endowed scholarships establish permanent scholarship funds for student tuition. For example, an endowed scholarship donation of $15,000, when matched by the state, totals $30,000. At 5.5 percent interest, this generates $1,650 annually to provide a full scholarship to PJC in perpetuity.

All donations are tax deductible. The deadline to qualify for the dollar-for-dollar match is Dec. 31. Help a deserving student realize his or her dream of higher education.
